COLOMBO, Sri Lanka — Government troops killed as many as 35 Tamil rebels in the deadliest clash this year, the military said Friday. The attack came just days after the insurgents agreed to peace talks, the first in four years in Sri Lanka, where the 11-year uprising has killed 34,000 people. Some military officials are reported to oppose the proposed talks, but the ambush did not appear to have been planned to try to prevent them.
